

Living with OCD Panel: Featuring Mothers of Children with OCD

By Dr. Rachel Strohl

On Monday, June 9, 2008, a panel of mothers spoke about their experiences having children with OCD at the New Jersey Obsessive Compulsive Foundation (NJOCF) quarterly meeting. The mothers each shared their stories of how their children were diagnosed with OCD and received various treatments, and then audience members interacted with the panelists during a question and answer session.

These are the four women's stories:

A) A mother of a seven year old son was diagnosed with OCD two years ago. She and her husband noticed their son was asking the same questions over and over again, and demanding the answers in the same way or he would get very upset and frustrated. The boy reported "something didn't feel right," and he would have to repeat an action repetitively (e.g., tying and untying shoelaces) until he relieved the bad feeling. He received cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT), which taught him to externalize the OCD and boss it back. The parents used a reward program to reinforce the therapy at home. Presently, his OCD symptoms are mild, and she is proud that her son has learned to accept and challenge his OCD.

B) A mother of a nine year old daughter noticed that when her daughter was in second grade, she couldn't stop blinking and it was diagnosed as a tic. She developed other behaviors, which were later diagnosed as OCD rituals, such as touching the right side and then needing to touch the left side. Since the mother was a licensed clinical social worker, she expressed feelings of guilt that she "should have known." The mother reported feeling fortunate to receive exposure and response prevention (ERP) therapy. She also shared a negative experience at school when a teacher threw her daughter

Next Quarterly Meeting: A Specific Obsession Examined

Our next quarterly meeting will take place on Monday, September 8th at 7:30 PM. It will be held at the usual place at Robert Wood Johnson Hospital in New Brunswick. Find directions and a map towards the back of this newsletter. Dr. Monica Terwilliger Williams will be speaking on, "Homosexuality Anxiety: A Misunderstood Symptom of OCD."

Dr. Terwilliger Williams practices at the Center for the Treatment and Study of Anxiety, Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia. She is an Assistant Professor at in the Department of Psychiatry at U of P, and has contributed multiple book chapters and published multiple academic publications. She recently contributed a chapter to book, "Leading-Edge Health Education Issues," in which she explored the topic that she will be discussing at our meeting.

Dr. Terwilliger Williams explains in her own words, "Homosexuality concerns are a common symptom [of OCD] that may go unrecognized by professionals who are not well versed in the assessment of OCD. The talk will focus on the phenomenology of homosexuality anxiety, how to distinguish this form of OCD from sexual identity crisis, real examples, and using Cognitive Behavioral Therapy for treatment."

Please consider coming to this meeting, even if yours or your family members' OCD is not of a sexual identity nature. The understanding of this phenomenon, and an in depth review of its treatment will provide important information for people with OCD who may be struggling with many different types of obsessional concerns.

YOU VOTE: Should We Change Our Meeting Location?

For several years now, we have held our quarterly meetings, which take place on the 2nd Monday evening of the months of March, June, September, and December, at Robert Wood Johnson Hospital in New Brunswick. People have sometimes complained that parking is difficult, negotiating traffic in New Brunswick makes them uncomfortable, and there is a long and convoluted walk from the place you park to the meeting room. People who support this location say that they are happy with the central location, as it is right off of Route 18, and near Route 1 and the NJ Turnpike.

We have been considering changing our venue. Specifically, we have looked into the East Brunswick Library, which is about 15 minutes from New Brunswick. The parking is close and plentiful, the surrounding area is more attractive and subdued, and the library itself is a more intimate environment. While we would not offer our regular selection of coffee and goodies, the library has a snack bar with smoothies and sandwiches and snacks just a few feet outside of our meeting room, and will be open during our meeting time. On the other hand, the library is off of Cranbury Road in the center of East Brunswick, and is a couple of miles off route 18. Still, some believe the drive is more direct and less stressful.

Please let us know what YOU think. But don't wait too long, as we will be making this decision soon, and this will affect the December meeting (which we already have reserved at the library.) Write Dr. Allen Weg at AllenWeg@aol.com to let him know your opinion. We will take very seriously the responses which we receive. If you do not contact us, we will not know what you want. Thanks!

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear Friends:

I hope everyone was able to enjoyed the unusually warm Summer, and look forward to a bright Autumn season, with much in store from the NJ OCF.

Our NJ Affiliate is now in its 10th year, and I sincerely hope that this organization has helped many of you during these past years. OCD is the 4th most common mental illness affecting many lives. Of course we realize that we still have a long road ahead of us in meeting the challenge of bettering the lives of the OCD sufferers, together with their families and significant others.

I look forward to seeing all of you at our upcoming Fall Meeting on September 8th, at Robert Wood Johnson Hospital, and of course, at our Annual Conference on September 14, 2008. It will be held at the Double Tree Hotel in Somerset, includes a full brunch, and will prove to be a most informative day!

Sincerely,
President Ina Spero

CONDOLENCES

The NJ OCF would like to extend its sincere condolences to:

Barbara Tanz, on the passing of her husband, Ira, who served as the organization's voluntary accountant.

Beverly Roberts, on the passing of her husband, Dr. Albert R. Roberts, Rutgers professor and author. Beverly has volunteered her time to the NJ OCF during many past years at our Annual Conference.

OUR PRESENTER

NJ OCF is thrilled and honored to have Dr. Jonathan Abramowitz as our headline speaker at our next annual conference. Dr. Abramowitz is Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is also Associate Chair of the Department of Psychology and Director of the Anxiety and Stress Disorders Clinic at Carolina. Before moving to North Carolina in 2006, Dr. Abramowitz was Director of the OCD/Anxiety Disorders Program at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Dr. Abramowitz received his Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology from the University of Memphis and completed his predoctoral internship training at the Eastern Pennsylvania Psychiatric Institute in Philadelphia, PA. He completed a postdoctoral fellowship at the University of Pennsylvania Center for Treatment and Study of Anxiety, also in Philadelphia. He has authored or edited 5 books and more than 100 research papers, book reviews, invited commentaries, and book chapters, mostly in the areas of cognitive-behavior therapy (CBT), obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD), and other anxiety disorders. Here is a description of Dr. Abramowitz's presentation in his own words:

“Many people with OCD have close interpersonal (e.g., marital) relationships. Although often a means of support, these relationships can negatively impact the course of OCD and the outcome of cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT). Relationship dissatisfaction, for example, serves as a stressor that can make OCD symptoms worse. Even if a couple does not seem to be having relationship problems, some types of behavioral patterns between partners can maintain OCD symptoms and interfere with CBT. Examples include a spouse who willingly engages in avoidance of certain “contaminated” areas to appease his partner with OCD, and a girlfriend who willingly provides reassurance to her partner when repeatedly asked questions about obsessional fears. Because such behaviors prevent the affected individual from overcoming OCD, they should be addressed in CBT. At the University of North Carolina, we are presently developing a couples-based CBT program for OCD. In my talk, I will first describe ways in which maladaptive couple behaviors can interfere with CBT. Next, I will describe how we are working to enhance CBT for OCD using couple therapy strategies that facilitate exposure therapy and promote new learning for the partner with OCD.”

The second part of the program, entitled, “Living with OCD,” will consist of a panel of those affected by OCD, who will each briefly speak about their experience and then take questions from conference attendees. This will be moderated by Allen H. Weg, EdD, Vice President of NJ OCF.

Living with OCD Panel...

out of class for "behavior problems." The mother educated the school that OCD is a neurological disorder, not a behavior disorder, and there are more beneficial ways to respond to her daughter's actions.

C) A mother of an eight year old daughter realized her daughter kept checking "if mom would die" when she was three. At age four, she was diagnosed with generalized anxiety disorder and separation anxiety and received "sand therapy, which was not helpful." By five years old, she was asking her mother "strange, intimate questions . . . and confessing everything." She was diagnosed with OCD with sexual obsessions and began CBT and a psychotropic medication, a type of SSRI. The mother described the psychiatrist taking her off the medication after about two years, but within several months, her daughter requested the medication because she "couldn't live with the thoughts." Her mother proudly described her as "the bravest human being I know."

D) A mother of a sixteen year old daughter described how her daughter has been severely debilitated by perfectionistic OCD since she was nine years old. She has worked with many therapists, but since her daughter "refused to do the work" of ERP, she has maintained her severe OCD symptoms. She explained that her daughter has "tried all the medications and they didn't work for her." Her daughter has been in two hospitals specialized to treat OCD and is being admitted to another one at the end of the month. Currently, her daughter is in a resource room at school but doesn't read or write because of her symptoms. The mother described the struggle with OCD as "tough, but we're hanging in."

It was clearly evident that the audience members were emotionally moved by the panelist's personal stories of their children. Many people asked thoughtful questions regarding many of the topics in their stories, such as therapy, medication management, and family roles. Audience members shared their own personal battles and their children's fight against OCD, and most importantly, they shared hope, support, and compassion.

Dr. Rachel Strohl is a licensed psychologist at Stress and Anxiety Services of NJ in East Brunswick. She is on the Board of Directors at NJOCF. She may be reached at 732-390-6694.

Do you suffer from Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder?

If you are on medication but still have symptoms, you may be eligible for a treatment study at Columbia University/NYSPI that would provide medication or cognitive-behavioral therapy at no cost to you (IRB#5188).

If you are not on medication, you may be eligible for a brain scan study that will provide payment for your time and treatment at no cost to you (IRB#5494R).

For more information, visit www.columbia-ocd.org or call us for a confidential screening at (212) 543-5367.

Presenting At Your Local School

Whether layperson or professional, if you have an interest in presenting to a faculty meeting at your local school on the topic of OCD in the school environment, please contact Dr. Cindy Haines at 732-390-6694 x5. You will make the contact and arrange for the presentation. We will provide you with a very specific script that you can read from and handouts which you can leave with the school staff. We will give you very specific instructions on what to say and how to share the handouts. The presentation takes less than 10 minutes.

This is being done as a way of fulfilling the National Obsessive Compulsive Foundation's mission of educating the general public about the disorder and encouraging early identification and treatment of OCD in school-age children. Please consider helping us out in this very worthwhile project.

SAVE THE DATE! FREE! FREE! FOR THE 2008 MEETINGS!

Obsessive Compulsive Thinking

by Janet Berkowitz

"Suicide, suicide, suicide, now, now, do it now... suicide, suicide". That's how my mind works when I'm isolating too much or I'm on the wrong combination of medications. The best way I know to describe this obsessive compulsive thinking is (that it feels like no oxygen is going to my brain) - that my brain can't breathe. It's not that I want to act on it - on the contrary, I dread doing it. (In fact, I'm a firm believer that an unhealed mind is no more or less painful whether it's encased in a body or not. So if I'm thinking about suicide and go through with it, then I may not have all the opportunities available to cure the symptoms that I have while I'm in a body.) Besides, and more importantly, life looks like it has so much to offer. And I can't bear the idea of leaving my family.

The first time the perseverating ('shrink' talk for repeating) thought of suicide entered my mind was when I was 8 years old. I kept it a secret, shrouded in thick blankets of fear. Secrecy, I'm convinced, is the most dangerous emotion known to man. Somehow it passed and didn't return until my 21st year. After a very manic episode, which I refer to as 'my manic summer of '79', I fell into this suicidal depression that was horrific. The repetitive thoughts began with a vengeance. The only difference between that occurrence and current occurrences of this phenomenon was that in 1979/80 I really believed I was going to follow through with it and that I deserved it.

Finally I surrendered to hospitalization and discovered that I had bipolar disorder. What I didn't realize til many years later was that I also had OCD, a common friend to manic depression. One of its manifestations in my life has been excessive nose picking (obsessive impulse disorder), which I wrote about in this newsletter years ago. Knock on wood, I've been free of this for almost 8 months.

Obsessive compulsive thinking is not what usually comes to mind when considering OCD, but it's very common. Repetitive thoughts and/or negative images can seem like a broken record, (or in modern terms, a CD that skips). And it's important to know that it's treatable.

According to psychologist Jonathan Grayson, who is also an OCD specialist (and luckily for me, my therapist) there is a difference between negative thinking (or stinking thinking as it is called in 12 step programs) and obsessive thinking. "A negative thought", he says, "is a way a person beats himself up; for example 'I'm a jerk and I know it'. There's no uncertainty about the thought. An obsessive compulsive approach would sound more like this: 'I'm a bad person because I did "such and such"'. On the other hand, maybe "such and such" wasn't so bad.'" OC has a constant waffling tendency with a lot of doubt.

For me, the OC thinking is agonizing. I have had everything from homicidal thoughts (not aimed at anyone in particular), to thoughts of hurting animals, which I very much love. They are intrusive, darting in and out equally as fast. That is where the antipsychotic medications come in. Years ago I started taking Seroquel, which immediately slowed down the racing thoughts, but also increased my desire for food and sleep (and my waistline has increased). Now as a size 2X, I have begged my psychiatrist to put me on something else. Abilify, the newest member in my psychotropic regimen of drugs is giving me a new life. I can now stay awake for a whole day. But I still take a little seroquel to keep the fast thoughts at bay. I have a great respect for the medical world but also for my instincts which tell me when too much of something is too much. I must be on my 20th psychologist and 15th psychiatrist, but it's worth finding experts who acknowledge my internal expertise. I urge anyone with racing and intrusive thoughts to have hope. There is help. I am open to talking about this and related topics: Janet B. (856) 222-1715 and my email: berkyl22@gmail.com. Peace.

WANT TO HAVE A SUPPORT GROUP IN YOUR AREA? WE CAN HELP!

If you look at the back of this Newsletter, you will see that there is only a small handful of support groups for OCD around the state. It is one of the goals of NJ OCF to help create more of these groups. We at NJ OCF receive several phone calls every month asking for support groups in areas of New Jersey where there are none. Northern counties and southern counties are especially devoid of groups.

If you are interested in having a group in your area, we can help. Here's how:

- 1) If you want to have a group, you need to find a place to meet. Local churches, synagogues, libraries, high schools, hospitals, and community mental health centers are good places to find free rooms. If you say you will be working with the NJ Affiliate of the OC Foundation, it might also give you some "clout."
- 2) Determine the day and time- this will in part be determined by room space availability- no more than twice a month is needed, and once a month is often a good place to start. An hour and 15 minutes or an hour and a half is usually the length.
- 3) Contact us. Call Ina Spero at 732-828-0099 (9 a.m. - 9 p.m.). We can put your name and contact number on our website and in our Newsletter. We will announce the formation of your group at our quarterly meetings. We will help to put out the word. You can also do your part by letting local mental health professionals and facilities know about the group (sometimes this means going door to door with a flyer). Decide whether this is a group only for adults, only for sufferers, or open to everybody- we recommend the latter- friends, family, and children with OCD.
- 4) Once you have a minimum number of people- 5 is enough to get started, let us know. We will give you some guidelines about how to run the group, provide you with handouts that you can give to members of the group, and answer questions that you may have regarding the mechanics of how to facilitate group discussion.- Don't worry if you've never done anything like this before. We will "hold your hand" in the early phases of the group until you feel more comfortable. WE ARE HERE TO HELP!
- 5) If you have any questions of a clinical nature regarding running or forming a group, you can phone Dr. Allen Weg at 732-390-6694.

NEW WOMEN'S ONLY GROUP IN JACKSON

A new Women's only support group is being held in Jackson, New Jersey. This group meets on the first Sunday of each month, from 8:00 to 9:30 p.m. at the Debows United Methodist Church at 509 Monmouth Road in Jackson.
